

Two, two, what are two?

<https://riverofsong.uk/>

This sweet little number rhyme, possibly of Japanese origin, ends with a big hug. A very kind viewer suggested this might be a translation of the poem "Futa-tu" by Michio Mado: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YVtzyL3Ap3c> Wish I'd listened to it before making up a tune!

Music by Dany Rosevear.

1. Put up one finger on each hand Point to each eye then each ear. 2. As before, then clap hands and stamp feet twice. 3. As before. Point to child and give a big hug.

Two, two, what are two? Eyes are two, one, two, Ears are two, one, two,
Two, two, what are two? Hands are two, one, two, Feet are two, one, two,

Two, two, what are two? You know, you know, My arms are two!

Two, two, what are two?
Eyes are two, one, two,
Ears are two, one, two,
Two, two, what are two?
Hands are two, one, two,
Feet are two, one, two,
Two, two, what are two?
You know you know,
My arms are two!
