A song for bedtime. Words and music by C. Horn Irmengarde C. Horn; can be found in 'Songs of childhood' published in 1923.

When the moon comes up so still and bright, And the stars are in the skies, Then — children know its time for bed And time to close their eyes; For the fairies wait till you're asleep To bring sweet dreams to you, And the moon and stars through the lattice peep To see what the fairies do

When the moon comes up so still and bright,
And the stars are in the skies,
Then children know it's time for bed
And time to close their eyes.
For the fairies wait till you're asleep
To bring sweet dreams to you,
And the moon and stars through the lattice peep
To see what the fairies do.
